1 person - 15 minutes.

Complete the I-report. Do this for each part.
You start in the middle. The more boxes you color in outwardly, the better you feel.

The I-report form is a circular radar chart with 12 segments, each representing a different skill or attitude. The segments are arranged in a circle, and each segment is divided into four concentric rings, allowing for a self-assessment on a scale from the center to the outer edge. The segments are labeled as follows:

- I have confidence in myself
- I would like to learn
- I work at a good pace
- I work neatly
- I check my work carefully
- I can concentrate well
- I am good at working together
- I can solve problems myself
- I think about myself and my work
- I am kind to others
- I keep the agreements
- I can plan my tasks well
